

FORTY-THREE MILLION
MAY VOTE ON TUESDAY

By far the largest number ever registered, forty-three million men and women, have qualified to participate in the battle of ballots at the presidential election next Tuesday, November 6. The total marks an increase of nearly 14,000,000 over the vote cast in 1924, and makes the figures of former years seem small in comparison.

From coast to coast and from the Canadian border to the Rio Grande, statistics gathered by the Associated Press tell the same story, that of unprecedented determination of the voters of both sexes to participate actively in the contest of 1928.

According to this survey, California has 2,313,816 registered voters this election, as compared with 1,281,778 in 1924.

All those entitled to vote will not do so, however, for a study of the vote of other elections has shown a considerable percentage not exercising their privilege.

It would be well for the voters of Daly City and Colma to realize that all indications are that there will be an unusually large number of voters who will go to the polls next Tuesday. And in view of this fact, it will be a wise procedure for all voters to go to their voting places as early on election day as possible.

Delay until late in the day may result in some voters not being able to get into the voting booths in time to cast their ballots for the candidates of their choice.

Vote early, and thus be sure that you exercise your great American privilege of casting your ballot as your conscience dictates.

BODY OF SLAIN MAN
WASHED UPON BEACH

The mutilated body of an unidentified man that had been cast upon the rocks at Pedro Point, and was discovered last Sunday, was finally brought to the top of the bluff by Constable S. A. Landini, aided by several helpers.

The body, with a rope knotted tightly about the neck, was found in the water on Sunday by two Burlingame youths. Such was its position on the beach that it was not until Monday evening that Constable Landini, aided by several helpers, was able to get it to the top of the cliff, where it could be examined.

A close examination after it had been brought to the top of the 700-foot bluff showed that the man had what appeared to be a bullet hole through the head, below the left ear; another hole above the heart, which might have been caused either by a shotgun fired at close range or a stab wound with a heavy knife, and that both legs were chopped off between the hip and the knee.

Constable Landini is quoted as saying that it was his opinion that the man was the victim of a brutal murder. The body appeared to have been in the water at least a month, and it was in such condition that an accurate description is almost impossible.

Constable Landini declared, however, "the teeth are in good condition, and from them it should not be difficult to identify the man." Coroner J. C. McGovern, of South San Francisco, will make a thorough examination of the body.

It took Constable Landini and a number of helpers all day to rescue the body from the sea. The work was done by means of a winch carried on an automobile truck to the top of the cliff on the old Ocean Shore road. Seven hundred feet of steel cable and a large basket were used to bring the body to the top of the bluff.

CITIZENS AIR VIEWS ON COUNTY CHARTER

A meeting was held at Redwood City last Monday in which citizens of San Mateo county and the county board of supervisors discussed a proposed new county charter, annexation with San Francisco, and other matters, in which there was plenty of oratory, but no final action.

The board room was crowded with representatives of various chambers of commerce and civic organizations, many of whom expressed their views on county government, new county charter and kindred subjects.

As no definite county charter proposition was before the meeting, an adjournment was taken without action. It is probable that other meetings of the kind will be held to sound out the sentiments of the voters on the subject.

The discussion developed that there were present those who favored a new county charter without reference to consolidation; those opposed to any action on the charter until the question has been settled; those favoring consolidation only; and those opposed to consolidation or a new charter, and satisfied with the present form of government.

Chairman John Poole of the board of supervisors declared the meeting was called to discuss various suggestions made with reference to a proposed new form of government.

Fred H. Drake, president of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce, who sent out the invitations to the meeting, reviewed the various "steps taken to strengthen and improve the present system," declaring that the last two grand juries recommended a new charter, that the money for a proper survey was not available, and recommending that now the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce having made a survey, the time was ripe to consider the charter.

W. J. Claus, Beresford, urged that action on a new charter be delayed until the committee of ten appointed to make further recommendations with reference to consolidation with San Francisco have time to make a report.

John P. Daley, president of the Burlingame Chamber of Commerce, declared the subject of a new charter had been discussed for years and had gotten nowhere, and recommended that no action be taken at this time.

Gilbert D. Ferrell, Burlingame, expressed the view that no action should be taken toward a new charter until the people had an opportunity to express their wishes.

Horace Amplett, San Mateo publisher, declared we should study our own form of government before we gave any consideration to the plan of relinquishing our own independence and become the prey of political bosses in another county.

J. W. Coleberd, city attorney of South San Francisco believed we should have a committee to study the benefits to be found in other charters, notably the Alameda county form.

Several citizens expressed the opinion that the present government was sufficient, others coincided with the view that a new charter was needed, and still others believed that consolidation should be given first consideration.

HISTORIC SITES ARE PROPOSED FOR THE STATE PARK SYSTEM

Historic sites and landmarks in Sonoma, Marin, Napa, Solano, Contra Costa, Alameda, San Mateo and other central California counties may be preserved as State Monuments in the State Park System, according to advocates of Amendment 4, the State Park Bond Act. Among the suggestions contained in a recent report to the California Historical Society, which is to be transmitted by them to the State Park Commission, are: Home of Jack London, Glen Ellen; Old Vallejo Mansion, "Lachryma Mortis", near Petaluma; Site of Russian Settlement, Bodega Bay; Site of Indian Battle, San Antonio, fought in 1815 between the Spaniards and the Indians under Chief Marin; Luther Burbank's Home, Santa Rosa; Olompali Rancho, Novato, near which are many prehistoric shell mounds; Old Limekilns, Olema Creek; Drake's Bay, Marin County, where Sir Francis Drake probably sheltered his ship "Golden Hinde" in 1579; Site of Wreck of Ship "Tennessee", Tennessee Cove; Old Mill, Mill Valley, built in 1834 by John Read, first English-speaking settler in Marin County; Old Home "Fighting Joe" Hooker, Shellville; Site of Old State House, Vallejo, legal capital of California from 1851-1853; Old Silverado Mine, Mt. St. Helena, described in Stevenson's "Silverado Squatters"; Old Toll House, Calistoga; Old Mill, Calistoga, built in 1846 by Dr. Edward T. Bale; John Muir Home, Martinez; Old Marsh Mansion, Brentwood; Bret Harte Associations, Alamo; Old Castro Adobe, El Cerrito; Site of Livermore Adobe, Livermore; Site of Early Wreck, Pigeon Point, South of Pescadero, where the "Carrier Pigeon" of Boston was wrecked in 1853; Here is also an old whaling station; Site of Early Wreck, Franklin Point, where the "Sir John Franklin" foundered and the "Cora" of Australia was wrecked in 1866.

A survey of historic sites throughout California is being made by a special committee of the California Historical Society, based on a report by Aubrey Drury, member of the Society. When completed the results of this survey will be presented to the State Park Commission.

Commenting on the importance of the preservation of relics of California's past, Francis Farguhar, chairman of the committee, says: "Tourists travel every year brings over $150,000,000 in new money to California. These visitors are drawn here partly by our regions of scenic grandeur and partly by the romantic traditions and historic associations of California represented to-day by historic sites, many of which will be obliterated, or else exploited for private purposes, unless the State takes steps to preserve them."

PHOTOGRAPHS BY WIRE AID ADVERTISING MEN

In a recent address before the members of the Advertising Club of Boston, Louis W. Munro, New England manager of Doremus & Co., in speaking of financial advertising, stated that telephotography had become a most valuable aid to advertising in the broadcasting of syndicated financial ads timed for a simultaneous release to morning papers across the country.

Before this invention was developed, it was necessary for the advertising counsel to send matrices to the papers on his list or else to telegraph a description of the ad and its set-up. The development of telephotography has simplified this problem to a considerable extent and has also given the advertising counsel more time to work out his problems, as it only takes seven minutes to send a picture by wire from New York to Boston to Chicago or San Francisco.

LAST PILE FOR BAY BRIDGE IS DRIVEN

The last pile of the San Mateo-Hayward bridge over San Francisco bay was driven on Thursday of last week, and all piers for the seven-mile span have been completed. The last big concrete pile went in near the San Mateo end of the bridge at Coyote Point, completing the line to the east side of the bay.

Workmen are ready for erection of the first steel span, being assembled at South San Francisco, where 2,000 tons of steel are already on the ground, it was stated today by A. W. Deuel, Burlingame, chief engineer.

The South San Francisco assembly plant will have the span ready within about a month and it will be floated to the piers for hoisting into place. There are five spans to be placed over the central channel, each 300 feet in length and all will be assembled at South San Francisco.

With the completion of the piers there remains but 2,700 feet of concrete deck slabs to be laid between the channel and the Alameda county shore and work is progressing rapidly, indicating that the bridge will be ready for traffic next March, unless unforeseen delays occur, Deuel said.

Paving of the three and a quarter-mile approach to the bridge on this side will be finished this week and the paving crews will move to the Alameda county approach, where a two mile roadway is to be paved with heavy concrete of the same type as is being laid at this side of the bridge.

OBSERVE ARMISTICE DAY, NOVEMBER 11

Through the American Legion, which was instrumental in having Armistice day, November 11, made a school holiday in California, Governor Young has issued a special message calling upon the citizens of the state to participate with the World War veterans to the end "that the day be devoted to patriotic observance of such a nature as to build up, in the youth of the state, high patriotic ideals."

Each of the three hundred odd posts of the American Legion will join with local organizations in the various California communities to observe Armistice day, according to State Adjutant James K. Fisk, who has sent the message from Governor Young to the ex-service men and women of the state. Governor Young's message follows:

"November 11, this year, will be the tenth anniversary of the Armistice day which marked the cessation of the most destructive and far reaching war in the history of the human race.

"It is fitting that the anniversary of this day should be commemorated with prayer and thanksgiving and by exercises designed to promote the spirit of peace.

"The international movement to secure the universal observance of Armistice day by the two minutes of silence and roll call was observed in twenty-eight states last year. May I suggest and recommend its adoption by municipalities, patriotic societies, and churches of our state. The ceremony consists of sounding of roll call at 11 a. m., to announce this eventful hour, followed by two minutes of silence ending with taps.

"During the period of silence there should be a complete stopping of street traffic, and all activities so far as possible should cease.

"I earnestly recommend that the school children of the state be prominently included in all exercises, and that the day be devoted to patriotic observance of such a nature as to build up, in the youth of our state, high patriotic ideals.

"Flags will be ordered flown on state buildings, and it is hoped that every home and building in the state will also arrange to display the National Colors on that day as an expression of gratitude that peace exists, and our sincere desire that war may be forever outlawed."

SEVENTEEN YEAR OLD GIRL SEES FIRST TELEPHONE POLE

People get so accustomed to our modern conveniences that they do not realize that there are some people in the world who have never seen them. The other day a seventeen-year-old girl from St. Kilda, a lonely island in the outer Hebrides, Invernesshire, 100 miles from the Scottish coast, Miss Rachel Gillis, was taken on a trip to Lancashire. It was the first time she had ever left her island home and never before had she seen a telephone or a telegraph pole, a tree, a horse, a motor car or a railway train.

"What are those funny wires hanging on the poles for?" she asked. She also was very much interested in observing trees, which she had seen before only in pictures.

NEW LICENSE PLATES ISSUED DECEMBER 15

The 1929 California automobile license plates will be available for general distribution at all branch offices of the Division of Motor Vehicles on December 15.

This announcement has been made by Frank G. Snook, chief of the Division of Motor Vehicles, who explained that the experiment conducted last year of opening the registration period two weeks earlier had proven so successful that it had been decided to make it a permanent arrangement.

Snook said that although the law does not require motorists to display the new plates until after the first of the year, the earlier opening will eliminate a large part of the "rush" of former years as well as enable the division to give the motoring public a quicker and better service at reduced cost.

The machinery of the division is now being set in motion to register nearly two million motor vehicles. Five carloads of the new plates have already arrived in Sacramento from the factories of the Norton Manufacturing Company and are being prepared for distribution.

The office counters at Sacramento and its branches at Los Angeles, San Francisco, Oakland, San Diego and Fresno will be thrown open on December 15.

However, those desirous of avoiding the necessity of making a special trip to these offices for new plates may mail their fees to the Division of Motor Vehicles at Sacramento any time after December 1. The plates will be mailed out promptly after the 15th. It is entirely unnecessary to make a special trip for the plates.

Although the new plates will be larger, heavier and will have a much greater degree of visibility because of the new system of lettering adopted for 1929, the fee schedules for pleasure cars will remain the same as in previous years.

Christianity Means Emancipation From Thrall-dom of Superstitious Fear

By BISHOP JAMES E. FREEMAN (Episcopal).

WE HAVE been reminded in certain quarters of late that the teachings of Christ place large limitations upon life, that they produce a form of slavery and restricted freedom of action. There is certainly nothing in the words of the great Master to confirm this. He declared that He came to usher in "the more abundant life." He contended with the narrow churchmen of His age for their ungenerous and repellent systems, and sought to make evident to men the value of a religious habit and practice both appealing and life-renewing. There is urgent need that the youth of our generation should be made to understand that the Christian life as conceived by the Master is designed to enrich and emancipate men from the thrall-dom of superstitious fear and burdening anxiety. In one of the most remarkable utterances of Jesus he said, "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." It was the inspiration of such teaching that prompted the early disciples, in speaking of their new-found faith, to characterize it as "the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free." They preached this liberty to men and women who all their lifetime had been subject to bondage through fear. It was such preaching and teaching that wrought a change in the habits and practices of men as had not been known before.

Christianity stands today as the sponsor and guardian of human liberty. Its ideals carried into the common things of everyday practice must effect finer conditions of individual and social life and contribute mightily to the happiness and peace of mankind the world over. Christ is the exponent of a philosophy of life that bears immediately upon our dearest and finest interests. To accept such a philosophy and live by it means to recognize plan and purpose as well as objective in the scheme of life. It means to make the part we play indispensable to the outworking of an orderly universe. It means to see in the cumulative effort of life the gradual consummation of our highest hopes and expectations. It means to see at the end of its way the dawn of a better day and the attainment of life's supreme aim.

Only Reasonable for Mankind to Believe That There Is a Life After Death

By REV. JOHN A. VOLLENWEIDER, New York (Methodist).

While I do not put much confidence in immortality on the basis of future rewards to be obtained, or think of heaven as a fire escape from hell, there is, I believe, available for all men the power of endless life. Some men deny the fact of immortality on the grounds of reason and lack of scientific verification and also on the grounds that it is "wish thinking," based on emotional and not on intellectual reaction. Others, frankly in doubt and confused, say "I do not know." On the other hand, the reasons advanced by some people for belief in immortality bring the question of life after death into disrepute because a life after death, consisting of blissful, inactive enjoyment with a generous supply of golden harps, angelic choirs, crowns and golden streets, is certainly far from attractive to thoughtful people.

Emphasis has been given also to so-called communications with departed spirits, but the evidence is slender. Psychology has given scientific explanations of many phenomena once puzzling to the human mind. It is, however, reasonable that any demand as persistent and universal as is the demand for immortality be satisfied. It is reasonable that there be life after death.

Without immortality life would be characterized by futility and mockery. The hope of ongoing life extends our whole conception of the worth and dignity and significance of human life.

Divinity of Mankind Can Be Relied On to Overcome Present-Day Ills

By DR. GEORGE GILMOUR (Unitarian), Denver.

The feelings of mankind instinctively revolt against any system of thought that threatens to lower the dignity of man. Hence the mechanical theory, the reduction of man to a mere machine, has evoked a great protest from those who behold their spiritual aspirations threatened.

The results achieved in the course of evolution naturally lead up to identify the creative power with the mighty forces and capacities of nature that explain the perpetual life and growth of plants, animals, man and ideals. This cosmic order is a wonderfully sublime order and there is evident progress toward the higher in the world.

The religion of Christianity and evolution makes it clear that man is endowed with divinity. Of self-seeking intrigue in politics and an increase in loose living in domestic relations, there is no need for despair. There is enough moral and spiritual power resident in the human beings of this generation to create mankind.

The normal human being has a wholesome admiration for justice, honesty, truthfulness, forbearance, good will, unselfishness, and these are the advance guards of life.

A revival of the true religion of Jesus will come when the moral law has a sufficient voice in the life of the churches and church leadership pledges itself to make men more keen for truth.

Enlightened Systems of Education Have Largely Done Away With Truancy

By CHARLES L. MOSHER, New York Educational Director.

Adjusting the school to the various types of children—rather than adjusting the children to the school—is part of the system of education as developed by the state departments of education.

Not very long ago a child was subject to an inflexible course of study from the first grade to high-school graduation; and in that period education literally was shoved into his head, no allowance being made for mental ability or emotional adequacy.

But this system, after years of study, has changed and will continue to change. Adjusting every year of school to the child means greater power. There are as many different personalities as there are children and as many stages of native capability. Today we do not ask a boy to absorb more than he has power to, and thus we avoid the conflict and the rebellion bred in the old system.

The wider scope of the educational objective has also solved for the most part the truancy problem. We are still troubled to some extent by such factors as foreign-born parents and economic hardships making for illegal absences, but the truant of the old type who stayed out of school as an expression of rebellion against the order of things has disappeared.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Dirt will fly this fall on approximately $1,000,000 worth of road projects in southern California, the Department of Public Works announced in outlining work scheduled for bid openings within the next two weeks. Activities will cover practically every county south of the Tehachapi.

Legislation creating a staff of State detectives will in all likelihood be urged at the legislative session this winter. Already the matter has been laid before Governor C. C. Young and his attention called to the service in law enforcement which it is claimed the cities and counties of the State would receive under the proposal.

Labor's endorsement of the State plan to take over entire control of highway traffic police practically insures acceptance of that program, Frank G. Snook, chief of the division of motor vehicles, believes. Snook, while finding the forces in most of the counties efficient, declared that a greater efficiency can be maintained by co-ordination of all authority in the State.

An $8,000 gold pocket has just been taken out of a claim in the Tuttle town district, near Sonora, by Hank Bernard, prospector, according to semi-official reports. Bernard, admitting a "good strike," declines to state its extent. Recently he dug out a pocket of $3,000 in the same workings.

The street car public of Los Angeles a few days ago started to dig down into its pockets for an extra 2 cents fare. A new 7-cent fare, allowed the Los Angeles Railway Corporation at least temporarily by the United States Supreme Court, went into effect, and conductors are busy accustoming themselves and "John Public" to the change. Many of the street car operators reported cases of where citizens, angry at being required to pay an extra 2 cents, got out and walked.

Salmon and striped bass still are abundant in the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers, according to the reports received by the Pacific Highway Association. Despite the lateness of the season, bass are making bold to venture far up the Sacramento and San Joaquin. Storm waters have not yet rolled the rivers and fishermen are reaping large catches in both streams. Along the northern shore line of Suisun Bay, ducks are reported plentiful.

For the first time in San Quentin's grim history, a condemned murderer last week cheated the gallows by committing suicide. His method was that of the law—hanging. Leong Ying, the Chinese who killed 11 of his countrymen in a dope-inspired murder orgy August 21, on a Fairfield ranch, is the man who anticipated the command of justice. His broken body was cut down from an improvised noose in his cell on "Condemned Row."

Show horses of a diversity of types from all parts of California are expected in San Francisco for the sixth annual horse show, to be held November 8, 9 and 10 at the St. Francis Riding Club. Polo ponies from the best civilian and army stables, hunters and jumpers, saddle mounts of every class, stock horses and harness teams all will be represented, Dr. T. R. Creely, chairman of the arrangements committee, announces. All proceeds, as usual, will be devoted to charity, and members of the Junior League are assisting with arrangements.

State Controller Ray L. Riley recently announced the receipt of $520,398 from the federal government, which represents the State's share of royalties on government oil lands located in California. The money from this source is used to support the junior colleges. The appropriation arrived five months early said Riley and this will make unnecessary an emergency allowance to replenish the depleted college fund. Riley declared the junior colleges are growing so rapidly that it will be necessary for the 1929 legislature to provide additional State revenue for their support. The State allows each college $2,000 and $100 per pupil in daily average attendance.

California's share of federal oil and mineral land lease payments, totaling $520,398.16 for the 1927-28 fiscal year, was received in Sacramento last week and will be spent by the State government for support of junior colleges.

The voter need not have such a long, long trek to the polls to cast his ballot for President on November 6, no matter where he lives in California, with a grand total of 9086 polling places arranged for his convenience, Charles Hagerty, state election statistician, announced recently. Los Angeles County gives its citizens the greatest choice of voting booths with a total of 2711 in that county, while San Francisco follows with 1003 and Alameda is third with 768.

Proposed State laws governing one phase of the aircraft industry—the licensing of planes and their pilots—were discussed and agreed upon at a meeting held under auspices of the Railroad Commission a few days ago in the State Building, and will probably be presented to the Legislature next January. The State law, adoption of which will be urged by the general aircraft committee appointed by the commission will be almost identical with the United States Department of Commerce regulations now in effect. It was pointed out at the session.

PENNSYLVANIA TO DRILL RESERVES

Lack of Substitutes Last Year Lost Three Games.

The crying need of armies, teams of all descriptions but more particularly at this time of the year, football, is adequate reserve material. At the University of Pennsylvania the need is urgent judging by the amount of time the coaches are spending drilling the substitutes.

Last year Pennsylvania suffered heavy losses through injury that robbed the team of its mainstays in the heat of the season. Paul Scull, John Shober, Martin Brill, John Utz, Mort Wilner, all regulars were rendered hors de combat during the Penn state contest.

With so many of the best players out of the lineup it is little wonder that the team suffered the slump that caused the loss of three games. When the regulars returned to their positions there was a decided change in the team as Columbia, Harvard and Cornell will testify.

This season the reserve material has come along better than last, the individuals giving every indication of rounding into such form as will relieve the coaches of some of their worry. However, constant drilling in fundamentals with scrimmage as the real test, will keep the substitutes busy from now on.

Lud Wray, the line coach, will have as understudies to the regular tackles, two players who saw action last season. Gene Kuen, who was understudy to John Smith and Bob Schneider, who also saw service in a number of games, should be better than they were last year. Each has had the necessary game experience to make them first rate substitutes.

Bill Williams, star of the freshman eleven's line last season, is making both Kuen and Schneider hustle for the honor of being the first tackle substitute. Others in the running include Barrett, who has been on the injured list for three weeks, Farley and Beaumont.

The guard reserves present a problem. Of the four men only one, Warren, a scrub last season, seems to have the necessary qualifications for big game service. The others are learning fast but still need plenty of work. Charles Urban, the minister, Thwaites and Smalley are waging a keen duel for the honor of being the first substitute after Warren.

Ed Jordan holds the honor of being understudy to Westgate, the regular center. His experience as a freshman last season makes him highly valuable. He has Looby and Lockhart, the former a scrub last year and the latter a freshman guard, to battle for the post.

The end problem continues to be acute. Although Buch and Olexy started in the opening game, neither is certain of keeping their positions. Bill Sullivan and Mory Schalmann, both substitutes last season, may yet win regular posts. Both are hard fighting, tearing in ends who can snare passes with the best and either or both may oust those now holding the fort. John Ball, first-string substitute last season is still in the running. Red Welham, a newcomer, who reported three weeks late, has displayed considerable promise.

In the backfield, Coach Bert Bell has Wilner, an experienced quarterback, and Ratowsky, a halfback last season who is also calling numbers. Carroll Rosenbloom, has a slight edge on the other candidates for the first call if anything should happen to the regular backs. Frank Mulligan and Walter Opekun are other excellent prospects. Granville Carrel, substitute last season, and Walter Masters, former freshman star, have a fine chance to oust several of those already named.

Brief Advises Players

To Get an Education

Bunny Brief, Milwaukee sandlerer completing his nineteenth year of professional baseball, advises the young player to go to college.

"He will get the best out of the game by doing so," says Brief, famous home-run hitter of the Milwaukee American association club.

"He has an opportunity to develop his game as he gets an education—gets expert coaching. If he amounts to anything at all, he has the opportunity of starting his career with a bang by getting a bonus. In the old days there was nothing like that."

Slays His Father to End His Misery

Woodstock, Va.—What to do with a twelve-year-old boy who admits he shot and killed his father, after the latter had been accidentally wounded with another gun, "to put him out of his misery," is puzzling authorities here.

The father, according to the boy's story—and he is the only living witness so far found—was a mountaineer named Morgan Copp. He was sixty-five. He lived in a cabin in the foothills of the Massanutten mountains, three miles from this town.

Several days ago, the story goes, he was cleaning a shotgun, and, after loading it, handed it to the boy. Somehow the gun was discharged, the full load taking effect in the elder Copp's side.

The father fell to the ground, and, according to the boy, begged his son to put him out of his misery. The boy, Milton, then ran into the cabin, obtained a double-barreled shotgun and discharged both loads at his father, killing him.

The lad then telephoned the sheriff. Since he has been in jail here, charged with murder, he has reiterated the same story on continued questioning.

LOST CHILD IS FOUND BY DOGS

Two-Year-Old Wanders Into Forest and Loses Way.

Atlantic City, N. J.—After more than 100 volunteers and state police had searched throughout an entire night in the woods back of Absecon Highlands, near here, for Catherine Phillips, two years old, who wandered into the forest from her home, four police dogs, trained to follow trails, found the child sleeping in a thicket, nearly five miles away.

Catherine said simply that she was cold. Aside from many mosquito bites, she had sustained no injury.

At 6:30 o'clock at night the child left home to visit her grandmother, half a mile away. Darkness came and she wandered into the woods and was lost.

State police and a posse of searchers ranged the woods until early morning, when Oscar Deutcher of Egg Harbor, N. J., volunteered the use of his four dogs.

Catherine was barefoot and some of her footprints were found in the loam at the wood's edge. The dogs smelled of these and of the child's clothing, then the animals circled back and forth for a few moments and plunged into the woods, proceeding slowly at times and at others running swiftly for short distances.

Finally they came to a stop about a clump of scrub pine and barked furiously. Then the posse, including Catherine's father, discovered the child, lying asleep.

State police said Catherine must have walked steadily throughout the night, actually traveling more than the distance at which she was found from her home. Her feet were cut and scratched, but she did not seem to have suffered materially from exposure.

"Ghost Singer" Youth Warbling for Friends

Scranton, Pa.—The mystery of the "ghost singer" of St. Mary's Catholic cemetery in South Scranton has been solved and there will be no more singing.

Residents had told the police that for the last several nights about midnight the "ghost singer," with a rich tenor voice, had risen among the tombstones and sang, "Old Pal, Why Don't You Answer Me," and "Mother o' Mine."

News of the appearance of the graveyard singer spread and police estimated that more than 7,000 persons gathered around the cemetery waiting for the singer to appear.

Instead, however, a young man describing himself as Joseph Stamper, told the authorities that he was the "ghost." He said he had been singing nightly for friends in a field just outside the cemetery and expressed regret that he had alarmed persons in the neighborhood.

After reprimanding the young man the police told him to try his voice out over the mountain and not around the cemetery in the future.

Hoodoo Burns Barn

Muskogee, Okla.—John Coffey is without a barn on his farm because a cat crossed his path at an inopportune moment. When the farmer attempted to light his pipe the match broke and dropped into a kerosene can, which exploded and ignited the cat. The frantic feline scampered for the barn, and was consumed along with the building and hay stored therein.

Hangs Head Down

Owosso, Mich.—George Miller, eighty years old, an inmate of the county farm, is recovering from the effects of hanging head downward for 12 hours. His foot caught in a high wire fence while climbing over it and he was unable to release himself. He was in a semiconscious condition when found by a farmer.

SAVE AND BE READY

Opportunities come to everyone, but often the greatest opportunities can not be grasped because it requires a little ready money to enable one to take advantage of them. This point is emphasized by a well known financier, who in an article on thrift says:

"Those who have become leaders in the business world almost without exception found the turning point in their careers when they were able to take advantage of a great opportunity because they had the money at hand. In most cases the sum of money involved was small, but coupled with vision, ambition, clean-living and self-mastery, these men were able to turn their nest eggs into colossal fortunes."

It is undeniable that the habit of saving comes hard for some people, but having once made a start it is comparatively easy to continue. Nothing inspires the confidence of business men in a young person more than the knowledge that he or she is able to save money, even though the amount saved from month to month is not large. Many a young man has been enabled to make a most desirable business connection through a reputation for thrift and having a little ready cash.

The wise young person will begin saving early, so as to be ready when opportunity comes.

SCHOOL MUSIC BY RADIO

An important contribution to American musical life is seen in the forthcoming four series of graded concerts to be broadcast for the benefit of school children by Walter Damrosch, famed director of the New York Symphony orchestra, the first being given on October 26.

Mr. Damrosch will follow the plan which he so successfully followed in his thirty years of children's concerts in Carnegie Hall, New York City, and the success of a preliminary radio series last year leads him to believe that much interest will be shown in the concerts this season.

Through this ambitious program of musical entertainment and instruction, Mr. Damrosch will render a further distinguished service to the cause of music in the United States, to which he has already contributed so much.

Perhaps figures don't lie, but a great variety of conclusions may be drawn from the straw vote figures.

HOLLOWE'EN

Hallowe'en is a very ancient festival, whose origin probably antedates recorded history, but appears to have been an outgrowth of the custom of lighting sacred fires on prescribed occasions. In olden times an essential feature of the celebration was the lighting of a bonfire at nightfall by each household.

In Ireland and in parts of Scotland a similar festival, called Beltane, was observed by lighting two fires close together, when both persons and animals would pass between them in the belief that disease would thereby be warded off. Accounts of such a ceremony were recorded as early as about the year 908 A. D.

In Germany similar rites were held, often with a view to appeasing evil spirits, these being also observed with certain variations in Spain and Italy. China and Japan hold ceremonies for the entertainment of ghosts, when the streets are lined with lanterns. It is said that some American Indian tribes had similar customs.

Running through the history of Hallowe'en is the idea that spirits, mostly evil ones, were abroad on that night, which idea doubtless gave rise to the modern custom of playing pranks, such as ringing doorbells, carrying away gates and generally displacing anything lying around loose. Fortune telling and other mysterious proceedings naturally came to be features of the observance of Hallowe'en.

Hallowe'en comes on the night of October 31, an occasion of delight to the young, but of apprehension for those who are likely to be the victims of ghostly pranks. Yes, the young folks of this section celebrated Hallowe'en in the usual manner.

PREVENTION BETTER THAN CURE

A smoldering cigarette butt, a match dropped into a wastepaper basket, an iron left on the board, a discarded pile of dirty, greasy rubbish, or endless other such petty risks caused by carelessness, may be the means of transforming a home or factory or office building into a smoking ruin.

A large majority of homes have fire hazards that can be removed with a small amount of work or at slight cost. Poor wiring, carelessly handled heating and electrical devices and collections of rubbish are among the most common risks and account for many serious conflagrations. The danger lies in these every-day risks being overlooked or disregarded.

Fire is practically entirely preventable. Authoritative estimates state that 80 per cent of all fires result from carelessness or ignorance. With a little caution and understanding of possible hazards, homes and buildings can be protected.

Preventing fire is much better than trying to repair damage.

INDUSTRIAL PEACE

One of the most hopeful signs of the times, so far as industry is concerned, is the growing tendency toward co-operation between employers and employees in a spirit of mutual helpfulness.

The significance of this tendency is emphasized in a recent statement by the Department of Labor, which says in part:

"The new spirit has manifested itself in many different ways and along various lines. Today there are many instances in which unions and management are co-operating to improve the efficiency of the plant or the industry; to introduce new methods or machinery to improve the old ones; to reduce operating costs by eliminating waste and introducing economies; to improve the quality of the work produced; to bring up the total of production; to raise the general level of sanitation and safety, and to increase the skill and efficiency of the workers."

Among enlightened representatives of both capital and labor it is recognized that each is dependent upon the other and that the true welfare of all can best be advanced through seeking and removing the cause of strife.

In industries in which this spirit has grown up there have been few disastrous strikes or lock-outs in recent years. Through the spread of this spirit we may see the promise of an increasing measure of industrial peace and prosperity.

TAXED BUT CAN'T VOTE

Citizens of Washington, D. C., are again complaining because they are not permitted to vote, and inasmuch as they pay taxes as other citizens do, there appears to be justice in their complaint.

When the District of Columbia was organized in 1800 as the seat of government, it was placed directly under control of Congress, and no provision was made for the exercise of the franchise by its inhabitants, a situation which has since continued. The city of Washington is governed by Congress solely, and the people have no voice in the selection of officials placed over them.

Many persons employed in Washington have their residences in nearby states and these may vote in their respective states, but those who have their homes in the city do not have this privilege.

Thus nearly 300,000 persons of voting age will have no part in the forthcoming presidential election, in spite of the fact that they are keenly interested in the result.

If, as our forefathers declared, "taxation without representation is tyranny," the people of the nation's capital are well within their rights in asking to be enfranchised.

Many farmers have found that the cow, sow and hen afford more effective relief than the politicians.

CANADA IS A GOOD CUSTOMER

During the last fiscal year Canada bought from and sold to the United States more goods than any other nation, displacing Great Britain as Uncle Sam's best customer. Total trade between the two countries for the year amounted to more than $1,300,000,000.

While Canada purchased from the United States goods to the value of approximately $300,000,000 more than she sold, this apparently unfavorable balance was largely offset by the amounts spent in Canada by American tourists, so that there was perhaps an almost even break.

Commenting with approval on the growing trade between the two countries, the Christian Science Monitor says: "The relations existing between Canada and the American Union stands as the finest example of the way in which neighboring states should meet and discharge their neighborly functions."

Scientists say that the orange was formerly a berry, and that it has been developing for more than 7,000 years. Now perhaps some one will suggest a law prohibiting the scientists from spreading such reports.

LARGEST NUMBER OF ALIENS ENTER U. S. DURING AUGUST

The highest level of the year for immigrant entries into the United States was reached during August. The incoming movement during that month of 106,440 persons, including 63,191 American citizens and 42,249 aliens, was the largest for any month since September, 1927, when 75,557 citizens returned and 56,619 aliens were admitted to this country—a total of 132,176, it was stated by the Commissioner General of Immigration, Harry E. Hull. The net increase to our alien population during the month of August was 20,801 for the month, as compared with a net increase of 24,093 in August, 1927, and 26,967 in August, 1926. During the period of unrestricted immigration, Ellis Island was always considered the nation's main gateway, handling nearly three-fourths of the total immigration, but at present less than one-half of the new arrivals come that way.

No qualifications for government appointments avail, if they do not include ability to pick the winning candidate before election.

THE MAGIC CRYSTAL

"I am biting on some magic crystal," said Jack Frost, "which is to be found only by Jack Frost and his workers."

"We're to have some, aren't we?" asked Master Chilly.

"You must certainly are," said Jack Frost.

"Hurrah, hurrah,
I feel so gay;
Hurrah, hurrah,
I feel so gay."

sang Master Chilly.

And Master Very Cool winked his little right eye and said:

"Oh, Master Chilly,
You're very silly."

Jack Frost laughed—oh, such a cold laugh, and the wind echoed his laugh and the little Breeze Brothers echoed it, too.

"My workers are feeling in fine spirits, I see," said Jack Frost.

"They seem to be," said the Wind.

"Well, when we're chatting and planning, we like to have you around," said Jack Frost, "but Mr. Wind when there is work for us to do, you must be very quiet, very quiet and still."

"Ah," said the Wind, "you call it working, but it is really playing, for you love your work so."

"I know—you like to have it very quiet, though. Yes, it has always been said that on a quiet and cold, sharp night Jack Frost did his best work."

"True, true," said Jack Frost.

"Aren't we going to sharpen our teeth?" asked Master Very Cool.

"Yes, we want to sharpen our teeth," said Master Chilly. "We want to do so because you said that the magic crystal which you have been using was to be found only by yourself and your workers."

"You haven't really told us just why we are to sharpen our teeth."

"But we want to do it, if you do it," added Master Very Cool, "for we are sure there is a good reason for it."

"There is, indeed," said Jack Frost, "and I will tell it to you this moment."

"Do," urged Master Very Cool and Master Chilly.

"We must sharpen our teeth so they can bite—yes, we want to nip the hands and noses and ears and toes of grownups and children!

"That's what we want to do," said Jack Frost.

"That's what we want to do," repeated Master Very Cool and Master Chilly.

"On their way to school children will say their fingers and their toes and their nose feel so cold—and that they're feeling the cold for the first time."

"On their way to business grownup men will say the same, on their way to the markets to buy apples, potatoes, meat, and pudding, the mothers will say it, too."

"I don't believe you buy pudding at the market, Jack Frost," said Master Very Cool.

"I think folks make pudding," added Master Chilly.

"Dear me, dear me," said Jack Frost, "you mustn't be so fussy."

"I can't remember what they get at the markets, for I've not been around as yet this year."

"But anyway, we must have our teeth sharpened so we can nip them with the first cold of the year."

"We'll do it," they all agreed.

And they all sharpened their teeth by biting on the magic crystal, for the Frost season was at hand.

Parsees of India

Parsee Priest of India.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

THOUGH comparatively small in point of numbers, the Parsees occupy one of the foremost places among Indian nationalities.

Their social position, peculiar customs and manners are impressively striking to a stranger on his first visit to Bombay.

Their story is a romantic tale of a people whose ancestry appeared at the very dawn of history, and who occupied Persia when Abraham was a nomadic wanderer, tending his flocks on the sandy plains beyond the Euphrates.

They claim that their ancestral race was the foremost Asiatic nation of their time, whose grandeur, magnificence and glory were unsurpassed; that their kings were the most powerful and wisest of monarchs, whose armies were renowned for courage and military prowess; that they were valorous and energetic, bringing up their youth to "ride, draw the bow and speak the truth"; that their heroes were as humane as they were courageous; that their women were as brave as they were fair, and as celebrated for the freedom allowed them as for their modesty.

The Parsees are of Persian origin, of the Iranic race, and are supposed to have had a common ancestry somewhere in west-central Asia, where man, as we now know him, is said to have had his birth.

More than 3,000 years ago their forefathers left the uplands of that mysterious Aryan home from which our own ancestors had already gone forth, and were in all probability the first of the Indo-European family to embrace a purely monotheistic faith.

In religion they are followers of Zoroaster, who was a religious reformer and founder of this ancient Persian religion at a period probably prior to the Assyrian conquest of Bactria, his native country, which is said to have taken place 1,200 years before the Christian era.

At all events, the religion of Zoroaster can certainly claim a hoary antiquity which unquestionably challenges our deep respect.

The scripture of this faith, the Parsee Bible, is called the "Zend-Avesta," or more properly, simply "Avesta."

They are not fire-worshippers.

The Avesta proper is one of the most interesting documents coming to us from the early history and religion of the Indo-European family. It is made up of several distinct parts, many of which are fragmentary and of different ages, some of which must be many centuries older than our era.

This religious system is a monotheism. It recognizes the dual principle of good or light, and evil or darkness.

Fire is its principal emblem, as being the purest of all elements; hence the misconception that its adherents are fire-worshippers. The common charge of worshipping fire, the sun, water and air, brought against the Parsees, is not well founded.

The Parsees emphatically deny the charge, and history gives several accounts of acts of hatred shown by the Parsees toward idolatry.

God, according to the Parsee faith, is the creator, preserver and ruler of the universe. He is the emblem of glory and light. In view of this a Parsee while engaged in prayer is directed to stand before fire or turn his face toward the sun, because they appear to be the most proper symbols of the Almighty. Such is still the present practice among their descendants in India.

Zoroaster, the Parsee Moses, appears as a being of supernatural endowments and as receiving from the supreme divinity, by personal interviews, by questions and answers, the truths which he is to communicate to men. The idea of a future life and the immortality of the soul pervades the whole of Avesta literature.

Went From Persia to India.

When the Persian empire of Sassanides was destroyed by the Saracens in 651 A. D., the great mass of the nation was forced to adopt the faith of Islamism, the religion of their Mohammedan conquerors; but a small number clung to the old Zoroastrian faith.

After much wandering and enduring great persecution and hardship, they, in the Eighth century, emigrated to India and made a settlement at Sanjan, in the neighborhood of Surat.

Here they lived in the Sanjan country for some seven hundred years in tranquillity and in full enjoyment of their religious rites, under the government of the Hindu rajahs of Sanjan, Guzerat.

They chiefly occupied themselves in agriculture and industrial pursuits. It is said that they not only turned the face of the territory they occupied from a dreary jungle into a fruitful garden and made it blossom as the rose but they also enjoyed considerable prosperity.

About the time of the discovery of America the Hindu rajah's government, under which they lived, was overthrown by a Mohammedan-Afghan conqueror. The Parsees, with a high character for fidelity, were loyal to the Indian kings, who had given them and their ancestors a welcome when they had been driven from their own Persian homes by the same foe. They gathered their forces to the standard of the rajahs, and proved themselves of great valor. The result of the campaign was, however, one of disaster. They were finally dispersed from the Sanjan country and compelled to seek new homes in other parts of Guzerat.

It was probably some time after this event, though there does not seem to exist any authoritative record of the exact date when the Parsees arrived in Bombay. It may, however, be safely said that their settlement in that island was some time before Bombay was ceded to the British, in 1669, by the king of Portugal, as a dowry of Catherine, princess of Braganza, who became the wife of Charles the Second of England.

As a sect in Persia they have disappeared under religious persecutions, and have sunk into ignorance and poverty, though still preserving a reputation for honesty, industry, and obedience to law superior to that of other Persians.

Never Absorbed By the Hindus.

There seems to be no authoritative information as to the number composing the first exodus to India, or if the Parsee colony was ever materially increased by early additions from Persia.

For some 1,200 years they have lived among the all-absorbent Hindus, yet this mere handful of people have not been absorbed. During the last 300 years the transmissive influence of an Anglo-Saxon civilization has been reflected upon them, yet they remain Parsees still.

The Parsees of India have been exceedingly prosperous and have steadily increased in number, now being variously estimated at about 100,000 souls. They are most numerous in Bombay. A few have settled in China and remote places in India for the purpose of trade, but these outlying settlements do not contain more than perhaps 4,000 people. It is calculated that about 85 per cent of the Parsees in India reside in the Bombay presidency.

On the spread of Mohammedanism to India they became again the subject of persecution. Since the occupation of India by the British they have fared better, and now form a peaceful, intelligent, wealthy and influential community.

Physically they are tall and erect, having remarkably small hands and feet, with facial features resembling the Europeans. They have a quickness of action bordering on nervousness. Their hair is jet black and their eyes are dark. They are exceedingly polite, kind and hospitable, often putting themselves to great inconvenience to accommodate a stranger.

The Parsees have many customs that differ markedly from those of other peoples. That which marks them most strongly, perhaps, is their method of disposal of their dead. Since they hold fire, earth and water as sacred elements, they are unwilling to burn or bury the dead or to cast them into the sea or rivers. Instead they expose them to vultures in great round stone structures called "Towers of Silence." Five such towers rise on Malabar hill in the outskirts of Bombay.

ECONOMICAL DISHES

The coarser cuts of meat if properly cooked will have more flavor and will be as tender as the choicest steaks.

Casserole—Chuck Steak.—Cut two slices of chuck at least two inches thick and large enough to fit the casserole. Brown well in a little suet, place in the casserole with enough vegetable stock or water to just cover. Cover closely and simmer until tender, putting into a moderate oven. When the meat seems quite tender add six small onions, the same number of carrots, and enough potatoes to serve the family; continue cooking until the vegetables are tender. Thicken the gravy and serve from the casserole.

China Chilli.—Take two pounds of the neck of lamb, cut into small pieces. Soak one cupful of dried beans over night, drain, add the beans, one head of lettuce shredded, two sliced onions, salt and pepper to season. Add two cupfuls of boiling water. Simmer until the meat is tender, about three hours.

Graham Bread.—Take one-third of a cupful of sugar, one-fourth cupful of melted fat, mix well, add one and one-half cupfuls of sour milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt, three-fourths teaspoonful of soda, one-half cupful of white flour, two cupfuls of graham flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat well and bake one hour in a well greased bread pan.

Corn Pudding.—Take a can of corn, one egg, one-half cupful of thin cream—or milk with butter—may be used. Mix well, dot with small pieces of butter and bake twenty minutes. Add such seasonings as desired and serve with chicken, either stewed or roasted.

Chicken With Rice.—Stew a fat fowl until nearly tender then add one cupful of rice, cook slowly until the rice has absorbed all the broth. Season well and serve heaped around the fowl on the serving platter.

Sweet potato cakes are prepared in the same way and are delicious served with chicken.

Have a Crustie.

Pastry for crusties of all kinds is prepared as usual with the exception of the water. Fruit juices are used instead.

Apple Crusties.—Prepare the pastry, using orange juice and a bit of the grated rind for added flavor. Cut the pastry into rounds, squares, diamonds or oblongs and bake until crisp and well done. Crusties should be served the same day they are baked, or else reheat them in a hot oven, for if they have lost their crustiness they are not crusties.

For the sauce for the top of these crusties, take one cupful of chopped apple, two tablespoonfuls of brown sugar, a salt spoonful of nutmeg, a half teaspoonful of cinnamon, two tablespoonfuls of minced raisins, the whole moistened with one-third cupful of orange juice. Cook until the apples are soft. When cool spread on the crusties, adding a bit more sugar and a grating of orange rind. Serve with cheese, cut into long strips and piled in log cabin fashion.

Peach Crusties.—A rich pastry is desirable for these crusties and they may be made of either fresh, canned or dried fruit.

Mix a cupful of peach pulp, two tablespoonfuls of orange juice, three tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar and one teaspoonful of cinnamon. Simmer this mixture for ten minutes. Spread it on the crusties and cool. Apricots may be used instead of peaches but substitute a little nutmeg for the cinnamon. Orange juice is used in making the crust. A half marshmallow or a preserved green gage plum may be pressed into each apricot crustie to make it even more delicious.

Tutti Frutti Crusties.—Chop together equal portions of dried figs, dates, raisins, candied cherries and walnut meats. To one cupful of the mixture add one tablespoonful each of brown sugar, butter and one-half cupful of lemon juice. Put this mixture on the stove and cook for fifteen minutes very slowly. When thick enough to spread remove from the heat and cool. Cut crusties into various shapes, spread with a thin covering of the rich mixture and bake in a quick oven. Mix the crust with lemon juice.

Another fruit topping may be prepared with chopped dates, figs or raisins with sugar and orange or lemon juice.

Cherry Crusties.—To one cupful of fresh or canned cherries add two tablespoonfuls of sugar; if canned use half the sugar, cook, cool and press one-half a marshmallow on each crustie before baking, after spreading with the cherry mixture. The pastry for these is made with lemon juice. They may be covered after the pastry is baked or before, if served soon after making.

If Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of good water.

SAME PRESCRIPTION HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today. People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food and got plenty of fresh air. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings. The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe bowel stimulant.

This prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative. It has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds, fevers. Autoists Fight Gates

Automobile drivers of Australia are tired of climbing in and out of their cars in order to open and close road gates to keep cattle at home. In that land of many cattle it has been necessary to fence across many of the country roads. A scheme to have at each gate an excavation, with tracks across for cars, but so constructed that stock cannot cross, is meeting with high favor. No provision will be made for horses and carriages, because they are considered by ranches as being "relics of the dim and distant past."

CHAPTER XIV

"The New Life Comes in the Old One's Stead."

Payson Grant was brought to justice with commendable speed. What threatened to become the most sensational trial of the year was quickly finished with. Perhaps the great influence of some of those remotely concerned with it was not without effect.

The public which had heard vague rumors about the amazing way in which the confession of Grant had been brought about, was cheated of its thrills. Grant's counsel thought it better not to bring Deal Beach or the Weld camp into the affair. With his attorney, Grant came to see that he would make a better impression if it were thought the honest desire to atone actuated him.

Those employees he had paid to perjure themselves held nothing back. The man Grant had hired to put a revolver in Captain Sutton's pocket confessed fully. Sutton's excellent war record, the commendations of his superior officers and the testimony of the old friends who now looked, a trifle shamefacedly to his support, moved the governor to pardon him before the trial began.

Again Payson Grant occupied a cell overlooking the Hudson, but this time with the certainty that the river would be his for many years. Natica divorced him. The case was notable for the severe remarks made to her by the judge. Rarely had a woman been so held up to public scorn as that Natica Grant who had schemed to enter high society. When the trial was over she knew that social victories were impossible.

It was not until after Grant had been sentenced that Anthony Trent went to see Mademoiselle Dupin, who still remained with Mrs. Kinney. She asked him innumerable questions about his part in forcing the confession.

"I see very plainly how you did the thing up to the moment you drugged him," she said, "but it seems incredible you could have persuaded him that he had been a convict so long. He must have had some suspicion that something was wrong surely?"

"That was the hardest part," Trent answered, "but attention to details brought us success."

"You mean the fake cell and the wardens in uniform?"

"More than that. Grant was vain of his hands and wore his finger nails rather long. I cut his nails short and scrubbed his hands in a strongly alkaline fluid which roughened them and made the skin seem withered. Then Burton Warm rubbed them in garden dirt until they looked as though he had done manual labor for months. Also we cut his hair short. I figured that he would look at his hands instinctively. If they had been as he last remembered them he might

Sickle Still in Use at Galician Harvest

A Galician peasant girl frames her bronzed face with a russet-colored handkerchief. She wears a blouse of blue percale with sleeves of checked gingham, and a gray woolen skirt. The white and blue striped apron is crumpled by the sheaf of yellow wheat clasped in her smooth brown arms.

In Galicia many of the men emigrate to find employment, and the women carry on the work of the four seasons. The fields are small; the farming methods are the methods of the Homeric age. The red earth is turned in shallow furrows with wooden plows drawn by biscuit-colored oxen.

The seed is scattered by hand, and the soil is cultivated with wooden harrows. In June the grain is ripe, and the peasant girl goes into the field with her sickle.

have smelt a rat. I watched him wake to consciousness through a hole drilled in his cell wall. It was his hands that horrified him and made him believe. Then the element of good luck was there. We made a record trip from the camp with no tire trouble or motor police to hold us back.

"But the drug," she said, "as Mr. Warm was not a physician were you not frightened?"

"We had oxygen in reserve," he returned. "Of course there was danger but I had one of my hunches that everything would turn out all right."

"You are always successful," she said slowly. "I don't think any other living man could have done what you did for your friend. It amazes me that you do not look triumphant. You have accomplished the impossible and yet seem bored and tired."

She looked at him curiously. There was a certain sense of depression about him which she could not understand. She was satisfied that it was not a pose but the genuine emotion.

"I'm neither tired nor bored," he replied. "I'm nervous. What I did for Sutton was play, but now I want to do something for myself."

"Why should you fall at that?" she demanded.

"Perhaps because I am so anxious to succeed."

"Then you will only have to put out special effort," she smiled. "You see, Mr. Trent, I have very great confidence in you."

"I wish I dare believe that," he sighed.

"You know it is true," she said, almost indignantly. There was something vaguely frightening in this abandonment by Anthony Trent of his former supreme self-confidence.

"It has something to do with you," he confessed.

"But how can that be?" she demanded.

"I'm thinking about your future. You have no money and you cannot take any position, even a lowly one, without the danger of being recognized. You can wear clothes that are out of style and the severest sort of censure, but that won't disguise your unforgettable eyes. I recognized you. So did P. O. Why not others? If so, I remember you what will happen? You will go to prison. I cannot bear to think of a woman of your upbringing herded with the people who would force themselves on you. You would come out something different from what you were when you went in and nothing could give you back your old self. You would be a broken middle-aged woman for whom nothing was left but to live by crime."

She saw that he was agitated by the image that presented itself so vividly to him. And she knew it was true. Anthony Trent had reminded her of this constant menace of arrest and imprisonment. The police were still hunting for her. For the time she was safe, but she could not remain here much longer.

"Money, if carefully applied," he said eagerly, "will do most things. You and I have a fortune between us. If we choose, we can get away easily enough. You have heard Sutton say I must have spent a fortune over him. I told him I could easily afford it. Suppose I tell you I have spent every cent I had?"

"I can believe it," she said seriously. His expenditures had been on a lavish scale. There was distress in her face. "You have brought yourself to ruin for a friend?"

"No, not to absolute ruin. I said if you will remember, that we had a fortune between us. Look at this Mademoiselle Dupin. Have you forgotten this?"

Anthony Trent drew from a little chamois-leather bag that magnificent stone which collectors the world over knew as the "Nizam's Diamond." It was the famous jewel which Trent had taken from Mademoiselle Dupin when she had been known as the wealthy Long Island society woman, Madame de Beaulieu. Trent knew the stone but he did not know from whom she had taken it. The only data he could gather about it was that a messenger to whom it had been entrusted for deposit in the strong room of a bank was found murdered in the Thames, off Rotherhithe, ten years before. At that time the conservative estimate of fifty thousand pounds was placed upon it.

Mademoiselle Dupin gazed upon the glistening thing in silence.

Great Orators Among Red Men of America

Standing erect, with eyes flaming with enthusiastic ardor, and a mind laboring under an agony of thought, the Indian was a most impressive orator, writes Elijah M. Haines in "The American Indian." When he spoke before his assembled nation on some great subject he showed most manifestly that he was feeling an awful responsibility in what he attempted to advocate in behalf of his people.

Caleb Atwater, one of the United States commissioners who made a treaty with various Indian tribes for the purchase of large tracts of Illinois and Wisconsin in August, 1829, said the Indian's oratorical presence was the finest to be seen. "His eloquence abounds with figures from every subject which nature presents to his eye. When he touches upon the subject of the sale of his country his eye flashes fire, his whole soul is in every word, in every look, in every gesture. He raises himself on his feet, his body is thrown in every attitude, every muscle and nerve being strained to its utmost power. His voice is loud, clear, distinct, commanding. He becomes, to use his own phrase, a man."

Los Angeles Boy Needed Help

Leroy Young, 1116 Georgia St., Los Angeles, is a "regular fellow," active in sports, and at the top in his classes at school. To look at him now, you'd think he never had a day's sickness but his mother says: "When Leroy was just a little fellow, we found his stomach and bowels were weak. He kept suffering from constipation. Nothing he ate agreed with him. He was fretful, feverish and puny."

"When we started giving him California Fig Syrup his condition improved quickly. His constipation and biliousness stopped and he has had no more trouble of that kind. I have since used California Fig Syrup with him for colds and upset spells. He likes it because it tastes so good and I like it because it helps him so wonderfully."

California Fig Syrup has been the trusted standby of mothers for over 50 years. Leading physicians recommend it. It is purely vegetable and works with Nature to regulate, tone and strengthen the stomach and bowels of children so they get full nourishment from their food and waste is eliminated in a normal way.

Four million bottles used a year shows how mothers depend on it. Always look for the word "California" on the carton to be sure of getting the genuine.

PRAISE GIVEN NEW TRAFFIC CONDITIONS

A tribute to the improved traffic conditions along the peninsula with the opening of the new Bay Shore highway and the drive against "road hogs" is paid by a San Francisco newspaper, which says:

"Remember when a drive down the peninsula in heavy traffic was an ordeal that tried the nerves and the patience, and, one sometimes felt, a risk of at least a fender or two?"

"That doesn't require such a long memory, for it was but recently that the notorious 'bottleneck' remained unbroken and the auxiliary Bay Shore highway was not the improved thoroughfare it is today.

"But appreciative residents of San Mateo and adjoining counties are now pointing to another welcome factor for ease and safety of peninsula motor travel. It is the recent extension and development of state and county policing of the San Mateo county highways.

"Opening of the racing season at Tanforan has given the county highways the greatest burden of traffic in their history. Not only from San Francisco, but also from the south and other roads that 'feed' El Camino Real, thousands of machines converge upon the race track at about the same time every day.

"Much praise for the way this major traffic problem is being handled has been received by State Motor Vehicle Inspector Charles Reed, in charge of San Mateo, Santa Clara and San Francisco counties' highway guardians.

"Working with him is Captain James Logan, in charge of state traffic police in San Mateo county. Seven motorcycle policemen work under Captain Logan. Each is assigned to a separate district.

"Leland Bond and James Wallace are the guardians of Bay Shore highway and the general northern end of the county. In touch with them and in charge of the central section of the county, around San Carlos and Belmont, is James Dalziel.

"The coastside roads, including the Skyline boulevard and its tributaries, are patrolled by Douglas Goulson and Jack Quinlan. The remaining territory, embracing the southern section as far as Santa Clara county, is taken care of by Chester Kriess and William Reilly.

"A factor recognized as working for safer highways is the new all-night patrol of El Camino Real. A state officer and deputy sheriff cover the entire length of the highway within the county in speedy automobiles all of every night."
